ANCIENT PEOPLES

FOLLOWING THE FOOTSTEPS OF ANCIENT PEOPLES

The Aleutian Islands and the North Pacific Ocean have served as a unique land and water “highway” for ages and are a remnant of the 1,000-mile-wide Bering Land Bridge that enabled human migration to the Americas from Asia approximately 30,000 years ago. Waves of Paleoindian tribes from northern Japan and eastern Russia crossed the Bering Sea to Alaska and Canada’s northern territories where different peoples settled, intermingled and flourished. These tribes expanded, moved south and spread throughout North and South America; the lineage of the Native American tribes can be traced back to those ancient explorers. The subtle markings of this ancestral heritage are evident today in the artwork, tools and methods of subsistence living that enabled these people to dwell in such remote wilds. Today, along the beautiful windswept islands, one can still see the remains of native camps and artwork displaying the skill and pride of one of the world’s oldest cultures.

Tokyo, Japan
Experience Japan’s capital and the world’s most populous metropolis. Beneath the layers of thriving business districts, the latest architectural achievements and the wellspring of Japanese pop culture, you can find the inherent cultural core of this historic city. Intricate Shinto shrines and neighborhood public baths still reveal time-honored traditions.

Kushiro
The beautiful coastal port of Kushiro, located in the southeastern part of Hokkaido and facing the Pacific Ocean, is known as “the town of mist,” and has been a base for deep-sea fishing for over a century. The thriving Washo fish market sells fresh seafood such as saury, hairy crab, salmon, shishamo (a kind of smelt) and scallops. Nearby, the largest wetland in Japan, Kushiro Marshland, is renowned for its unique ecosystem, which can be observed directly from a wooden walkway. It is home to about 600 plant species, and offers habitats for migratory birds and the enormous Japanese crane, a traditional symbol of longevity and good fortune.

Petropavlovsk, Russia
Petropavlovsk, at the edge of Avacha Bay, is one of Russia’s oldest towns in the Far East and has one of the world’s most beautiful settings surrounded by wilderness sanctuaries and snow-capped mountains. The city is the commercial center of Kamchatka. In 1740, the explorer Vitus Bering reached Avacha Bay, and from here embarked on his voyage which led to the discovery of the Aleutian Islands. The region has since played a strategic role in the defense of Russian territory and was closed off to the world for decades until after the collapse of the Soviet Union in 1991, resulting in the preservation of its vast and unique wilderness including pristine volcanic areas, a UNESCO World Heritage site. Kamchatka is inhabited by the largest brown bear population in the world; almost one third of the world’s Pacific salmon population; and the powerful Steller’s sea eagle, the world’s largest eagle.
Transpacific Crossing
On deck, cruising between port calls in Russia’s Petropavlovsk and Dutch Harbor, Alaska, look for marine wildlife such as orca and humpback whales, harbor seals, sea otters and one of the most dense populations of sea birds on Earth.

Enjoy onboard lectures, live entertainment, Relais & Châteaux dining, Relais & Châteaux® cooking demonstrations, bridge tournaments, complimentary fitness classes, a casino, onboard spa treatments and stargazing. Or, simply wrap up in a blanket and relax on deck with a complimentary beverage of your choice while contemplating a panoramic view of the Pacific horizon.

Dutch Harbor, Alaska, U.S.
Dutch Harbor has a diverse history where culture and commerce have coexisted since the mid-1700s. At the confluence of the North Pacific and the Bering Sea, it is the only natural deepwater port in the Aleutian Islands, and vessels from around the world call here each year. Since 1988, the town has led our nation in both volume and value of seafood caught with more than 800 million pounds of seafood processed annually for export. Beyond the fisheries at the center of town, explore the terrain and wildlife of the island in the path of the indigenous Aleut people who have continuously inhabited these islands for close to 9,000 years.

Kodiak
Twenty thousand years ago, most of the Kodiak Archipelago was covered by glaciers that left scenic peaks, fjord-like bays and wide U-shaped valleys that became ideally suited for abundant land and marine life. The Alutiq, Kodiak’s first inhabitants, were drawn to the region by its plentiful fish and sea mammals. Russian trappers were led to Kodiak in pursuit of sea otter pelts and established the first Russian settlement here in 1784. When the United States purchased Alaska from Russia in 1867, the economy shifted to whaling and salmon fishing. Today, the town is home to over 700 fishing vessels.

Explore the island’s historic landmarks highlighting the Native American and Russian legacy and experience a wilderness that is matched in few other places on Earth.

Homer
Charming, colorful Homer sits amid towering snow-capped mountains and blue glaciers on beautiful Kachemak Bay, a sheltered arm of lower Cook Inlet. People have inhabited the area for thousands of years, drawn to its diverse land, mild climate and abundant marine life. In the 1800s, homesteaders and coal miners comprised the area’s population until commercial fishing became the mainstay of the town. Today, Homer is known as the halibut fishing capital of the world, and is home to an eclectic mix of artists, fisherman and outdoor enthusiasts drawn by the wilderness setting adjacent to the clear-water bay and the slow pace of life.

Seward/Anchorage
Enjoy a scenic transfer from Seward to Anchorage, with magnificent views of the towering snow-capped mountains of the Kenai Peninsula and the shores of spectacular Turnagain Arm. Watch for pods of orca or beluga whales hunting for salmon and waterfalls cascading to the valley floor en route to Anchorage.

Blanket tosses once allowed hunters to scan the frozen horizon in search of whales, seals and caribou; and more recently as a ceremonial end to the hunting season.
