Priscilla Meyer has taught Russian and Russian Literature at Wesleyan since 1968. She has brought many Russian writers to campus, sometimes helping them to emigrate to the United States. She has published books and articles on the interplay between French and Russian literature; on Soviet literature of the 1970s; and on Vladimir Nabokov. The Nabokov society of Japan has invited her to lecture on Nabokov in Tokyo and Kyoto in November.

Image courtesy of Priscilla Meyer